

Nasty Woman Exhibit

I participated in an art as protest exhibit at Tufts. The prompt was to create pieces that embodied what it meant to be a nasty woman.

I focused on my own person identities and wanted to convey struggles with gendered violence and search for bodily autonomy.

I created all of these drawings on Adobe Illustrator by hand.

Nasty Woman Exhibit

I have been a dancer for my whole life. I chose to create this piece because I believe dancing is such a powerful way to express control over your body while simultaneously letting go.

I wanted to create the effect that there is a lot of detail around the head and chest while the rest of her body splays out. I found that this pose to illustrate this juxtaposition well.
